Disadvantages

Distinctive Features: Green Orion (Not Concealable; Noticed and Recognizable; Detectable By Commonly-Used Senses; Not Distinctive In Some Cultures) [Notes: Tall like the Ruddies, but their builds are stronger and a life of manual labor gives them more muscle. Their skin comes in shades of green, and they have thick black hair with metallic green highlights. Body hair is common among males and females, and is considered a mark of distinction.] Pts 10

Reputation: Untrustworthy, 11- [Notes: Orions will honor their agreements, but beware the fine print.] 10

Hunted: Rennai Pirate Group 8- (Mo Pow, Capture) [Notes: A pirate group of Ruddies who see Delena as part of the cargo that was stolen from them by Gurahn and his crew. Although they don't want to expend the resources to go after the entire ship and crew, there is value in a lodubyal who is young enough to resell. Given the chance, they will separate her from her crew and sell her off to the highest bidder.] 15

Height: 1.72 m

Hair: Black with green highlights

Weight: 57.00 kg

Eyes: Green

Appearance: Serana's skin is forest green, and her hair is jet black with a bright green witch's lock on her right side. As one would expect for a lodubyal, she's gorgeous. But she no longer shows off her athletic build unless it's for a job. Serana can usually be found wearing loose-fitting coveralls with large pockets and a light overcoat. She saves the more extravagant clothing for wining and dining potential clients.

Background: Serana is a lodubyal, a courtesan trained from a young age to entertain. Upon completion of her training, she was sold to a minor family in the Orion Colonies and given to an idiot failson on a small trading ship. Serana's job was to keep the "captain" occupied and out of trouble while the crew handled business. This kept her away from opportunities for side jobs, and she was unable to build up enough money to buy herself out of her contract. Serana resigned herself to being a lodubyal until she was 40 and focused on learning things about the ship. She had 10 years left on her contract when the pirates attacked.

A small pirate vessel approached from behind and fired a warning shot before boarding. It was a ragged vessel, recently out of a fight. They smashed the communications equipment, took some valuables and removed the dilithium crystals, intending to repair their own ship and leave their victims stranded in space. They were almost finished when a Klingon warp shuttle arrived and fired upon the pirate vessel, crippling it immediately. The Klingons continued to fire until the hull was compromised. Survivors were trapped behind emergency blast doors and the boarding party was stranded on the trade ship. Things got worse when the Klingons beamed over a lunatic with a bat'leth who killed anyone with a weapon. The pirates fought back unsuccessfully, and one of them accidentally shot the Orion captain.

When it was over, the Klingon captain negotiated with the trade crew through a communicator. He just wanted spare parts and some of the cargo, and their ship would be left intact. Serana decided to take a chance. Since her contract was held by the trade captain, she volunteered to be part of the cargo to be taken. Anything would be better than where she started. The Klingons didn't want a courtesan, but they had recently escaped the Klingon Empire and desperately needed someone at the helm besides their own captain.

Before long, Serana found a place as her new crew's helmsman and cargomaster. In exchange for more starship training, she helped them get started as independent traders. If she could get a profitable business going, then maybe she could retire after all.

Personality: Serana's new crewmates have treated her as just another member of the crew, and she's unofficially adopted them as her new family. She's fiercely loyal to them and places them and their shared profits above all else. Serana can talk her way into or out of almost anything, and if something goes wrong... well, that's what Kebek is for.

Quotes: I'm sure we can work something out for the right price. Just kidding Captain, I'll lay in a course.

Powers/Tactics: Serana rarely needs to fight, but she's good at it. For the most part, conflicts are avoided before they happen.

Campaign Use/Notes: Serana could be encountered while arranging a job for her own ship. She could be looking for passengers, or move cargo, or perhaps attempting to sell a rare painting that she's recently forged.
